Parawood Collection

A' Design Award Winner

Composed of layered plywood panels, this wall piece grows from its own material logic.

Each cut leaves behind elements that become the beginning of another form, turning waste into repetition and rhythm.

The composition can be framed or left free, mounted in any orientation, and enriched by light and shadow as it quietly transforms with its user.

Helio Lamp

IF Design Awards Winner

Formed entirely from glass, this lamp captures the warmth of air and light in a single gesture. Its shape recalls the memory of Edison bulbs and softens their glow into a calm, diffused atmosphere. Light moves gently within it, clear, warm, and quietly present.

Totem Side Table

Pro Materia / Glass is Tomorrow Exhibition

Blown as a single volume of glass, it challenges the limits of scale and balance. The piece remains still yet versatile, a form that conceals its function until touched. Its smooth surface acts as both tray and tabletop, while the hidden interior offers space for quiet storage.

About

Sinem Hallı is an Istanbul-based designer and researcher whose work explores the intersection of industrial design, sustainability, and cultural narratives. Her approach combines material awareness, emotional durability, and systemic thinking to create meaningful and lasting design outcomes.

With a background in industrial design and brand communication, she works across disciplines through a material-driven approach that connects product design, accessories, and food-related experiences. Her work bridges research and production with conceptual clarity.

Her practice balances corporate experience with an independent voice, focusing on designs that evolve through context, continuity, and quiet precision.
